Armed Forces Take Power in Portugal

Close Brandt Aide Held as Red Spy

By John M. Goshko

BONN, April 25 (WP).—West German security officials revealed today that one of Chancellor Willy Brandt's aides was arrested yesterday on suspicion of being a long-time spy for East Germany.

He was identified by the federal prosecutor's office as Guenter Guillaume, 47. Mr. Guillaume came to West Germany in 1956 as a supposed refugee from Communism, and in the ensuing years he worked his way up through the ranks of Mr. Brandt's Social Demogratic party to become an assistant in the chancellor's office. Cairo Issues Communique Of Plotters

CAIRO, April 25 (UPI).—The leader of an underground organization that sought to overthrow President Anwar Sadat's regime had connections with the banned Moslem Brotherhood and was seeking to establish a state based on "faith, morals and virtue," the prosecutor-general said today.

The prosecutor issued a statement, the second in 48 hours. giving more details of the armed attack on the military technical academy April 18, in which 11 persons were killed. The assailants were planning to arrest Mr. Sadat, as he addressed a meeting of the Arab Socialist Union the same day, and seize power, the statement said.

The prosecutor's statement contained the text of "Communique No. 1." which the leader of the attempt. Saleh Sarivah, was planning to read over Cairo radio after seizing power.

The prosecutor said that Mr. Scriyah, an official of the Arab League, is a Palestine-born Arab. who holds Iraqi and Libyan pacsports. Mr. Sariyah last year visited Libya, where he conferred with Libyan leader Moamer Qadhafi, the prosecutor added.

Mr. Sariyah allegedly confessed that he began preparing his coup only after meeting Col. Qadhafi. The communique said that the new regime would promote Arab unity and work to liberate Israelioccupied lands.

The prosecutor said the communique read in part as follows: "Our beloved people, our glorious and patient nation. We succeeded today, thanks be to God. in seising power and arresting all officials of the defunct regime, and we are starting a new era."

Sadat Tells Why He Ousted Chief of Staff

BEIRUT, April 25 (AP) -President Anwar Sadat of Egypt says he fired his former Chief Staff Maj. Gen. Saadeddin Shazly because he "collapsed" when Israel counterattacked on the west bank of the Suez Canal near the end of the October war.

Mr. Sadat said in an interview published today by the Beirut magazine Al Hawadess that he kept the decision to oust Gen. Shazly, now ambassador to Britain, a secret for two months after the end of the war for "morale considerations."

Mr. Sadat gave this account: "When the Israeli forces staged the counterthrust Oct. 16, I ordered Shaziy to go personally to Ismailia within 90 minutes to hold the Israelis within the limits we had already defined around Deversoir Lake.

"I do not want to go into de-tails of the events that occurred during the next three days. But on Oct. 19 War Minister Gen. Ahmed Ismail called me after midnight, I went to the command headquarters to find Shazly collapsed. He was saying the war was over, a disaster had struck and that we have to withdraw entirely from Sinai.

"I studied the situation and found that the Israeli thrust was not frightening. But I was afraid Shazly's despair might demoralize other commanders in the operations room, which was Is-

Six-Weck Calm

The battle of Zakho has been a drawn-out affair. It started when the rebels surrounded the garrison and another government camp a few miles away. For almost six weeks they made no attempt to attack.

Comdr. Suvar said that his men started shelling the two fortifications last Saturday when they learned the relief force had left Mosul, 60 miles to the south.

Senate Confirms Envoy to Sweden

WASHINGTON, April 25 (AP). -The U.S. Senate cleared the way today for the normalization of diplomatic relations between the United States and Sweden. By unanimous vote and without discussion, the Senate confirmed the nomination of Robert Strausz-Hupe as the new American am-bassador to Stockholm. Count Wilhelm Wachtmeister will be-not a prospective presidential candidate, and if he had not acquired the reputation of something of a nay-sayer where arms control agreements are concerned, it would probably be easier for people to take at face value his recently restated arms-cut proposal and his sharpening criticism of the Nixon administration. Similarity, if President Nixon were not in such desperate political condition and so sorely in need of evidence of a continuing capacity to govern and achieve, there would probably not be so dark a cloud of suspicion hanging over the efforts of his administration-or parts of it, anyhow-to arrive at some sort of modest new arms accord with the Soviet Union by the time the President visits Moscow in June. But the fact is that politics, and specifically Watergate politics, now overlay what was in the best of times an arcane and difficult issue: namely, the pace at which it is prudent and or essential to go forward in the US. attempt to reach bilateral agreement with the Russians on limiting the deployment of strategic offensive nuclear weapons.

Sen. Jackson the other evening made a renewed appeal for a comprehensive and sizable mutual arms reduction, a proposal he had first put forth early in December; and he asserted that it was this sort of plan, as distinct from a partial "quick flx" agreement, that the administration should be seeking. Was Mr. Nixon really arguing for substantive cutbacks on both sides-or was he, as his administration critics suspect. attempting to head off a limited and achievable agreement by introducing one so large in its scope and so unacceptable to the Russians that it had no chance of serious consideration? Sen. Jackson returns the compliment. On April 12. Secretary Kissinger indicated that the United States had now pretty much abandoned hope of reaching a comprehensive accord with the Russians on limiting offensive weapons by the end of this year, and would seek instead a less ambitious agreement—presumably meaning a joint limitation on the deployment of the destablizing MIRV in connection with some agreement to extend the present five-year interim accord. Was the administration really acting to get control of a so-called "time urgent" problem or was it, as Sen. Jackson suggests, simply trying "to preserve the impression of momentum" and to meet a "politically expedient self-imposed June deadline"?

None of this augurs very well for the likelihood of contriving a U.S. position in the pending round of arms talks that could be the basis of a negotiated accord and also survive the test of Senate scrutiny in ratifi- a more stable and comprehensive accord. cation or other less formal proceedings. For it happens that the legislators who are most responsive to Sen. Jackson's lead in these matters and basically most wary of arms agreements with the Russians are also those legislators whose favor Mr. Nixon will most need if a bill of impeachment is sent over to the Senate from the House. And when you have said that, you will still have noted only a part of the Watergate-related political complications of the current phase of Soviet-American arms negotiations. At least as important a part concerns the Russians' own perception of the President's plightthey have what they doubtless regard as considerable opportunities to exploit it, and they presumably also have reason to wonder whether Mr. Nixon is sufficiently strong of tenured in his presidency to negotiate an agreement of any permanence or standing.

The times, in other words, could hardly be worse. And yet it is also true that both this

M Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., were country and the Soviet Union are moving toward a number of decision points in their weapons development and deployment that. once passed, could make the subsequent reaching of an accord infinitely more difficult-no matter how much more auspicious the political conditions of the time. In 1972 the United States agreed to a five-year interim accord on offensive weapons that fixed numerical ceilings on what each side could deploy and which gave the Russians numerical advantage over the United States in both land-based and submarine-based misslies. The "trade-off" was America's technological advantage -- the fact that the United States was vastly ahead of the Soviet Union in the development of the MIRV technology and thus in the number of deliverable warheads in its own arsenal. The follow-on phase of the negotiation was intended to deal with overall numerical balances and qualitative controls, bringing the two sides into rough equivalence. * * *

> However, even as the prospect of expeditiously reaching such an accord has faded —a fact confirmed by Secretary Kissinger in his April 12 remarks—each side has continued to go forward with its missile programs within the terms of the agreement; and there is considerable anxiety in government (not just on the part of Sen. Jackson) that in the absence of a comprehensive follow-on agreement, the Russians will convert their numerical advantage and the distinctive size of some of their ICBMs into a genuine threat by proceeding "to MIRV" their missile force. The Nixon administration response has been the inclusion in the fiscal year 1975 defense budget of funds for starts on new weapons to alter America's own force structure to counter such a threat.

It seems to us that in this particular setting, and given the inhibitions on negotiating a larger settlement at this time, Secretary Kissinger's desire to effect some temporary controls on each side's progress is reasonable and sound. The kind of agreement Sen. Jackson is talking about is equally desirable. But we believe it will be easier to negotiate (if it can be negotiated at all) once some short-term, time-buying accord to limit continuing expansion of each side's arsenal has been reached. We presume that the extension of the current five-year interim agreement that is under discussion in the administration at the moment would only make sense if it were accompanied by an insistence on putting some mutual limitation in place concerning MIRV deployments. And we presume too that any such move would be viewed as being only a necessary preliminary step to the achievement of

There is still plenty to argue about in the United States concerning the price America should pay for achieving even such a limited inhibition of Soviet arms progress. And there is at least as much to worry about in relation to the Soviet capacity to exploit Mr. Nixon's predicament or to misunderstand how it bears on the arms control talks. Maybe all this will foreclose the possibility of a time-buying agreement that would make the achievement of a larger accord more likely in the end. We do not think the two are mutually exclusive-on the contrary they strike us as being sequential steps. The trouble is that confidence among politicians and branches of government in Washington is so low and the temptation both here and abroad 'o exploit the arms dilemma is so high, that another opportunity

Kennedy's Soviet Visit

Sen. Edward Kennedy's visit to the Soviet Union bears all the marks of a pre-election tour designed both to extend a politician's experience and create the image of statesmanship. His hosts picked up their cue and received him as a man who may be the next president of the United States. It was the right response. The Kennedy family still has a magic of its own which contrasts with the present vacuum of American leadership. . . . The disarray of American politics is such that people grope for leadership wherever the light shines brightest, and the Kennedy light still does shine. . . . A great deal will depend on what rival candidates emerge in the coming year. If he does not enter the primaries he risks being overtaken. Perhaps he would not mind. His ambition seems healthily tempered by caution, and realism and a genuine concern for his family. But there is something inexorable in the pressures which push 2 Kennedy towards high office. . . .

Israel's Crisis

At the moment it hardly appears as if the transition from Golda Meir to Yitzhak Rabin means the start of a new chapter in Israel's history. Rabin is faced not only with an emotionally disunited land but also with a divided party which chose him only halfheartedly. In a situation which calls for decisive leadership, he is beginning his efforts to find a new basis for the country's various political groups without having received a clear mandate. The pressures being exerted upon him threaten to push political accents to the right. The trend is clearly toward a tougher external line. There is a great danger that, in his efforts to create a viable parliamentary najority. Rabin will be forced into compromises with demands from extremists inside and outside his party. It is not difficult to foresee the foreignpolicy implications which would inevitably result. And along with this, despite the country's grave situation, butter religious disputes continue unabated, with no reconciliation in view.

DACCA-The new state of Bangladesh having acquired one of the biggest Soviet aid missions in the developing world-a couple of thousand advisers and a program running to nearly $200 million—it seemed to me a good idea to ask the Russians how they were getting along here. They seemed to like the idea too, and this, through a haze of Armenian cognac, is what I think they were trying to tell me.

My hosts were Anatoli Zverev. who heads their mission, and Boris Koltsov, an embassy economic counsellor. Neither looked like an ugly Russian, but both plainly knew how it felt to be called one behind their backs. The Russians may be newer at this game than Americans are. but there isn't much they haven't learned by now about the sorrows as well as joys of handing money out.

One of the things Mr. Zverev felt strongly about, in fact, was the foolishness of actually handing it out. Only a fifth of the Russians' aid is in grants, whereas practically all the $450 million worth the United States has chipped in has been a gift. Why do you Americans give all this aid away? he asked.

You're just making Bangladesh a Baksheesh country. We mustn't treat them like children. Mr. Koitsov added. They ought to be self-reliant.

U.S. Agrees

They certainly had something there—at this point the State Department heartily agrees with them-but it isn't the sort of thing Bangladeshis like to hear. Though several Soviet projects may be considerably more useful in the long run than our own massive food shipments, long since eaten, the Russians are drawing a lot bigger share of the

Among their projects, Mr. Zverev told me, are a large thermal power station, two radio stations, an electrical equipment plant, 10 modern deep sea fishing trawlers with a grant to train Bangladeshi crews, and a dredg-ing fleet to clear Chittagong port of ships sunk during the war with Pakistan two years ago. This last is an espicially noisy one, Mr. Zverev said with something close to a wink, referring to scurrilous rumors here that the Russians are dawdling at the job in Chittagong until they can get away with setting up a naval base there. An even noisier one, which Mr. Zversy didn't happen to mention. is the squadron of MiGs the Russians have sent here, only to keep the planes so jealously guarded by Soviet military adrisers that local pilots can't get near them-or so the Bangiadeshis sar.

Apart from these complaints, Bangiadeshis keep picking on the Russians for everything else from tacky equipment, poor business practices and sharp barter deals to exploitation of national resources. This last has to do mostly with a brisk trade in shrimps from the Bay of Bengal which, as Mr. Zverev told me without hesitation, are being caught by Soviet teachers on the donated fishing trawlers and sold to the United States at a nice profit. And why not? Training local creas has turned out to be such a headache-how familiar all this would sound to an old U.S. aid hand-that senior officer-candidates are going to have

The only hitch might be if America should try to sneak in with some new private enterprise, now that Prime Minister Mujibur Rahman has nationalized 85 percent of the Bangladesh economy. Eye-Popping Visions By William S-E

WASHINGTON. — Immanuel youth, and warns of an age Nearing 80, the author of Worlds in Collision" and "Rarth in Upheaval" has for the past generation been setting forth a cataclysmic view of history. His theory is that ancient myths and scripture were reporting fact, not creating epic in recounting earthshaking events or apparent miracles; the Bible and our mythology is mankind's collective memory of events that took place in prehistory.

For example, Velikovsky suggests that the planet Jupiter threw off a chunk of itself which narrowly missed the Earth and collided with Mars, bouncing off to settle in orbit as the planet

This action of Venus as a kind of celestial pinbali did not go unnoticed ground 1500 BC, when Moses led his people out of Egypt (taking that unfortunate left turn away from the oil reserves. Up the Wall

The astronomical and historical professions have combined to hoot at Velikovsky; his million-book sales and current campus revival drive conventional stargazers up the wall of space. Scientists who have threatened to boycott his publisher are only now coming to regret their censorious impatience with a curmudgeon.

Velikovsky is of interest because he is a catastrophist whose ideas clean with the establishment of the physical sciences; but over in the realm of the social and political sciences, the catastrophists are firmly in com-

Astronomical catastrophists like Velikovsky look back and fit great cataclysms into their reading of the past; social catastrophists look ahead and project disaster into their readings of the future. Each has a few intriguing facts to go on, and constructs eyepopping visions out of the most speculative extrapolations.

The population catastrophists
—a hardy band that has been in business for more than a century -have been saying that a population "explosion" will turn prairies into urban slums. But now a pall of gloom has lowered over these prophets of doom: The American birth rate is dropping, knocking confident predictions of "300 million Americans by the year 2000" into a cocked hat.

Nothing daunted, a new breed of population catastrophists is arising: This mutation extrapolates the dip in the birth rate and sees an end to economic growth: envisions an only-child psychology gripping the nation's of conservatism on fresh idea;

Affluence and Survival—III

By Anthony Lewis

BOSTON. - When Americans ponder the future in terms of energy and resources, we allow thought to be distorted too often by two tenacious fallacies:

• That technology and determination will somehow enable us to avoid the physical laws of this earth-will let us get something for nothing.

• That the United States can have a future lived in splendid isolation from the rest of the Set down in black and white, those propositions look foolish. But people who ought to know better continue to use them as unstated premises. A recent example was an essay in the Wall Street Journal by Ralph Lapp. the writer on nuclear and other energy matters. It would be unfair to put too much weight on Lapp, in terms of either reliance or criticism, but his piece well illustrated the dangers of building castles on sand.

'Choices Ahead'

"The hard energy choices ahead" was Lapp's theme. He briskly and convincingly showed that the United States cannot go on as it has, increasing its use of energy 5 percent a year. The oil to keep pushing that curve up is just not going to be there, either American or Arabian, and the costs of such substitutes as shale would be enormous.

But having said all that, Lapp turned away from any thought of fundamental change in U.S. national habits or expectations. America has to go on with some growth in energy use, he said, and specifically with its tremendous reliance on automobiles. Why? Because "with so much of the nation's well-being linked to the motorcar," sharp change would hurt the U.S. economy too much. Thus the Lapp view of an energy-saving future for America turned out to be lighter cars that would get 18 miles to a gallon. America should add 25 million of them to the car population by 1980, he said, "flushing the low performance cars out of circulation." And then Americans should move toward an all-electric economy" based substantially on uranium: 1,000 nuclear power stations by the year 2000.

Meanwhile, in the Lapp scenario, the energy picture for the rest of the world would be "bleak." Developing countries, which could not afford either high-priced oil or the immense capital cost of nuclear power, might not be able to meet the energy requirements of "merely feeding the growing" In other words, hundreds of millions of other human beings would starte to death while Americans drove their new cars and enjoyed an all-electric future. The scenario assumes a level of American insensitivity, and militarism, that would make the U.S. destruction of Indochina look like a pichic.

It is in fact geopolitical fantasy to think that American super-affluence could long continue in such a way. Even though our hearts were stone, even though we accepted that Orwellian world, we know by now that neither economically nor militarily can the United States make the whole world conform to its views, much less suffer and die for its

But even in domestic terms the cost of going on up in energy use would be far greater than Lapp lets on. Those 25 million new cars, with old ones flushed out of circulation, would take im-mense energy and resources to build and still would leave the United States with a transportation system grotesquely inap-propriate to the age of scarce oil,

Or, again, consider the cost of shale oil—the cost in energy, not just money. Lapp himself points out that to get one billion bar-rels of oil from shale—less than 10 percent of anticipated 1985 demand—would require mining and processing 1.7 billion tons of shale and then somehow making the residue go away. That is almost three times the volume of all U.S. coal-mining now. Or consider the cost of that all-electric future. It would depend in part on strip-mining coal from the Great Plains. If you dig up Montana, cattle in feeding on grassland would go feedlots and eat grain produ by energy-intensive methods. The coal would have to be proce and moved long distances, would all take energy. The key concept, well desurb by Edward Flattau and Jet Stansbury in the Washington Monthly for March, is not energ gain. On close analysis, great technological wonders prod little net energy. If America wanted to risk 1,000 miclear power plants and that prospect widely viewed with apprehe sion—they might give us surpris ingly little energy beyond what went into them in raw materials construction and operation Fig. tau and Stansbury say the curonly about 10 percent

CAPE TOWN, April 25 (WP) .-

By Robert G. Kaiser MOSCOW, April 25 (WP),-Sen. Kennedy said he would do everything he could to help them. At an airport press conference this morning he said he was still supporting the "Jackson amendment" that would deny credits and tariff concessions to the Soviet Union unless it removes all its citizens.

No New Revelation

restrictions on the emigration of

Sen. Kennedy's meeting with the Jews produced no new revelations, but it was an unusual and vivid demonstration of the complicated new relationship between the two superpowers. The spectarle of a prominent American politician being escorted by a KGB man in a government limousine to a meeting with some of the bitterest dissidents in this supposedly totalitarian society would have tested anyone's imagination a few years ago.

Soviet indulgence of Sen. Kennedy's move appears to demon-strate the Kremlin's deep desire to maintain improved relations with the United States, and to resolve the current dispute over emigration which threatens to severely limit the evolution of Soviet-American trade.

A the airport, Sen. Kennedy said he had emphasized the emigration issue with every Soviet official he met during his oneweek visit here—a group which included Leonid Brezhnev, leader of the Communist party. Sen. Kennedy added that these officials did not indicate any change in their previously stated views on emigration but told him that the only Jews being denied permission to leave the country were those who had access to official secrets.

Security Grounds

The nine Jews whom Sen. Kenncdy met from 1:15 a.m. to 2:30 a.m. today disputed this conten-tion. Alexander Lerner, a cyberneticist with an international reputation at whose apartment the meeting took place, told the senator that the authorities made arbitrary decisions based on "national security," which could not be appealed and were not explained.

The Jews told Sen. Kennedy that entertainers, dancers and even a movie cameraman had been refused exit visas on security

Sen. Kennedy declined to give any details of his meeting with the Jewish activists at the airport this morning, but the Jews themselves filled in Western reporters later, Prof. Benjamin Levitch, as a corresponding member of the Academy of Sciences, the highestranking member of the group. said that Sen. Kennedy's pledge to try to help them was "serious and definite."

Last year, 35,000 Jews emigrated from the Soviet Union. Only a tiny fraction of these were highly trained, and very few were from the major cities of Moscow, Kiev, and Leningrad, where a third of Soviet Jews live.

This year, the rate of emigration has fallen about 20 percent. There has been no explanation for the decline.

Pentagon Chief Plans A-Arms Cuts in Europe

By John W. Finney

WASHINGTON. April 25 (NYT).—Secretary of Defense James Schlesinger is planning on reducing the sizable stockpile of nuclear weapons in Europe as well as cutting back the number of atomic-armed missiles and planes kept on alert.

To the European allies and the Pentagon, according to associates, Mr. Schlesinger has begun pressing the view that the United States has more nuclear weapons in Europe than it can effectively use. nuclear weapons provided a way of offsetting Soviet superiority in military manpover.

This concept found ready subport in the Joint Congressional Atomic Energy Committee, whose members saw, among other things, greatly expanded production of nuclear weapons, which consume relatively large amounts of fissionable materials as a way of expanding Atomic Energy Commission activities in their home districts.

As analyzed by Mr Schlesinger. the original military considera-tions that led to the buildup of nuclear weapons in Europe have been overtaken by events or merc based on mistaken assumptions.

Conventional Manpower

Although some of the siles still cling to the notion. Mr. Schlesinger does not believe that the nuclear shield permits a significant reduction to conventional military manpower. His argument for price increases outstripping Mr. Giscard d'Estaing retorted is that large conventional forces are still needed to make an enemy concentrate its forces and that the rate of France's economic growth since 1959 has been the highest of any Western in-dustrialized nation. "And you thus present a potential target for nuclear weapons.

Mr. Schlesinger also believes that while the nuclear shield remains an essential ingredient in the strategic posture of the Atlantic alliance, it has become increasingly unlikely that either side will resort to nuclear warfare now that the Soviet Union has reached rough nuclear parity with the United States.

His emphasis, therefore, is on trying to prevail upon the European allies to get over their reliance upon the "nuclear crutch" provided by the United States and build up their conventional capability.

Even in event of a resort to nuclear warfare. Mr. Schlesinger is stressing to associates, he does not foresee large-scale use of

THEATER. Train Station

Transformed By Barrault

By Thomas Quinn Curtise PARIS (IHT).-The Théatre d'Orsay, the first major new theater that Paris has had stnee before the war, has sprung up in a deserted railroad termi-nal, the Gare d'Orsay.

Though no mainline train has come into the station in the past 40 years, one side of the vast structure, built in 1900, until recently housed a hotel and a large restaurant. When the hotel closed, the building was to be demoished. But the Beaux-Arts stepped in and the building. stretching for a block along the left bank of the Seine, has been declared a historic monument The hotel part will become a maseum of turn-of-the-century artworks. The station section has been taken over by Jean-Louis Barrault.

He turned a wing of the station into a theater center, with a suite of offices near the entrance. The 900-seat theater has a wide and deep performing space on the ground floor. A promenade surrounds this main auditorum and beyond it is a bar-restaurant. decorated with sketches of scenic designs and costumes from many of Barrault's productions. ed to office with an increased majority over her United party Timing of Election

The internal dissension and equabbling that has rent the United party in recent monthsand which certainly had a lot to do with Mr. Vorster's timing of the election-cost it a great deal

It lost seats to both the left and the right, to the Progressives and the Nationalists. The results could be the beginning of 2 breakup of the United party and a greater polarization of political opinion in South Africa.

The Progressive gains could be the start of a new and more direct liberal challenge to the Vorster government. There is a rapidly emerging gressive party in the last Parliament, now there are six. which could break away from the conscrvative element and link up with the Progressive The amalgamation might go even further and open its doors to supporters of the newly formed Democratic party, which splintered away from the National party to the left. Although it failed to gain any seats in yesterday's election, it proved a rallying point for verligic (enlightened) young Afrikaners who are beginning to find the racist philosophy of their fathers outdated.

Parliament Investigation

Apart from internal strife, as its left wing battled with its right wing, the United party lost liberal body in the United party 2 lot of support because it co-operated with a McCarthy-style parliamentary committee, the Schlebusch Commission, set up to investigate "subversive" clcments and groups among sindents and religious organizations.

Big U.S. Trade Deficit Is Foreseen by Bank

ters .- Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. said today that a likely sharp decline in the values of agriculnural exports and the sharp rise in oil imports "could move the U.S. trade balance, into sizable

Morgan said in the latest edi-tion of its World Financial Markets that while agricultural exports ran at a $22-billion annual rate, seasonally adjusted, in Jan-uary-February 1974, against an annual $13.5 billion in the same 1973 period, volume rose by only 7 percent. Thus, the bank said, higher prices accounted for vir-ually all the export gain between

But, it added, cash prices for most major agricultural com-modities have fallen substantially in recent weeks, and the weighted-average cash prices for U.S. agricultural export commodities in mid-April were nearly 17 per-cent below the February average

Morgan said that the mid-April average level of cash prices was only stightly above the level for the whole of 1973. However, it noted that many observers expect further declines in the price of grains and other agricultural commodities because of record crops in the United States this year.

So, it said, "given the possibil-ity of at least some further decline in . . prices from mid-April levels, and a modest drop in the volume of shipments from recent levels the value of agricultural exports over the next year or so (could run at) an

NEW YORK, April 25 (Reuters).—The Eurocurrency pool reached $320 billion at the end of the first 1974 quarter, Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. said today. Morgan said preliminary figures showed the net size of the Europool—adjusted to exclude the double-counting which results from interbank redepositing—has increased to at least $160 billion. The bank said the gross size of the market at the end of 1973 was 2 9 8 9 6 9 shout $300 billion and the net size was $150 billion, up from $195 bil-lion and $105 billion respectively at the end of 1972. Morgan said a "sizable portion" of the revenues of oil exporting. countries, in excess of current ently being invested initially in the Eurocurrency market.

Meanwhile many oil importing rountries - particularly those which expect a large current account deficit this year (because of higher oil costs:-have acted quickly to arrange medium and Eurocurrency bank credit facilities, Morgan said. So far this year publicly aunounced borrowings total $12 billion, compared with about $21.5 billion in the whole of 1973, it The removal or easing of capital centrols by a number of comtries has increased the potential for capital flows between national and international markets, and increases prospects for the con-Eurocurrency market, Morgan Morgan said the dollar component of the Europeol had inrreased to a gross $215 billion, or net $110 billion at the end of 1973, but that the dollar's "market share" had fallen to 72 percent against about 83 percent in the States was "principally a function of posted prices." Morgan said Pebruary 1874 imports were valued at an annual rate of about

Given the lifting of the oil embargo and other domestic production and consumption pos-sibilities it said U.S. oil imports in 1974 "may well range between $20 billion and $23 billion, compared with less than $8 billion

Morgan said that some further increase in the oil import bill could occur during 1975, unless there was a sizable drop in crude

It said the effects of changes in relative price competitiveness. resulting from recent exchange rate changes—which have been masked by tight supply conditions—and indications that some foreign producers are mounting strong export drives were among other reasons for being cautious on the U.S. trade outlook

However, it stressed that the trade balance was only one factor affecting the dollar's exchange rate, noting that net invisible transactions for instance moved to a $2.4-billion surplus in 1973 from a $1.4-billion deficit in 1972. Even more important for the dollar's exchange rate are net capital flows, which can be aignificantly influenced by Federal Reserve policy, Morgan said.

The bank has reinforced its presence in the principal world financial centres with the opening of new operating points in Luxembourg, Hong Kong, Beirut and the United States, and a representative office

Société Générale de Banque now has more than 145 operating points established in 26 forcign countries.

European Banks International (EBIC) to which the Société Générale de Banque belongs together with live other major European banks—the Amsterdam-Rotterdam Bank, the Creditanstalt Bankverein, the Deutsche Bank, the Midland Bank and the Societé Générale (France)—has, in 1973, been joined by a seventh partner, the Banca Commerciale Italiano.

This means that EBIC is now widely represented in Western Europe.

In this connection it is perhaps appropriate to mention that in September 1973, the banks making up the EBIC Group founded a merchant bank in London, the European Banking Company Ltd.

This announcement is neither an offer to sell nor a solicitation of an offer to buy these securities. The offer is made only by the Prospectus.

DE BEERS CONSOLIDATED MINES LIMITED

Incorporated in the Republic of South Africa

Extracts from Mr. H. F. Oppenheimer's statement The net consolidated profit attributable to the company increased by 45 per cent to the record figure of R237 500 000, and earnings per deferred share rose from 45.2 cents to 66.1 cents.

The dividend on the deferred shares was raised from 18 cents to 24 cents a share. Sales by the Central Selling Organisation attained a new record of R921 000 000, which was 40.5 per cent higher than in 1972. Group diamond production was increased by 209 000 carats to 10 823 000 carats.

 In January this year the Orapa mine introduced a third shift to raise production from 2 400 000 carats to 3 000 000 carats a year. In February this year we reached agreement in principle with the Government of Lesotho to open the Letseng-la-Terae diamond mine. Work will start as soon as final agreement is reached and production is expected to begin in 1976. During the year significant improvements were made to wages and conditions of service, as part of the continuing programme to which I referred in my previous

 Good progress has been made with training and development schemes, particularly in mining, engineering and the building trades, and effective steps have been taken to improve communications between management and employees. Whilst we are encouraged by the progress made, we are conscious that much remains to be

 Our marketing division has continued to expand its advertising and promotion activities, in close co-operation with leading manufacturing jewellers and retailers. The relatively low level of ownership of diamond jewellery in some of these markets indicates that there are opportunities for further substantial growth, The recovery in the rough diamond trade from the difficulties in the last quarter of the year is occurring more rapidly than had been expected. The Israeli cutting industry is nearing full capacity and there are signs of renewed demand for polished stones in Europe and in some Far Eastern markets.

If present conditions are maintained it seems probable that sales for 1974 should be in the region of the record level attained in 1973.

Sales of industrial diamonds, both natural and synthetic, were also a record in 1973 and the market has continued to be firm.

Allowing for minority interests, the net investments and net current assets at 31 st December attributable to De Beers shareholders amounted to R752 000 000 compared to R642 000 000 at the end of 1972.

ZEN AND THE ART OF MOTORCYCLE MAINTENANCE An Inquiry Into Values By Robert M. Pirsig. Morrow. 412 pp. $7.95.

Reviewed by Christopher Lehmann-Haupt

I stopped reading this peculiar book with the special boredom and distain I have come to feel for philosophical discourses that attempt to wed the technology of the Occident with the spiritualism of the Orient. It may have been as early as the author's note, when Robert M. Pirsig informs us that his "Zen and the Art of Motorcycle Maintenance" is neither in any way to "be associated with that great body of factual information relating to orthodox Zen Buddhist practice" nor "very factual on motor-cycles either." Or it may have been when I learned that Mr. Pirsig hasn't written what might be expected from his subtitle, "An Inquiry Into Values," but rather an autobiographical account of a cross-country motorcycle trip he once took with his 11-year-old son, Chris.

In any case, when I discovered that the narrator is being haunted by a ghost from his past named Phaedrus, I grew mildly curious about what was going on. When I caught on that this ghost is stalking the narrator and his son much as the goblin pursues the father and child on horseback in Goethe's famous ballad "Der Erikoenig," I began to read with active interest. When I realized that this ghost named Phaedrus is actually an earlier personification of the narrator that was driven insane by some philosophical quest he once undertook and who was "killed" by electric-shock the-rapy, I utterly forgot that I was reading a book called "Zen and the Art of Motorcycle Maintenance." And when I began to see that all this was merely preparation for an account of Phaedrus's philosophical quest, and that this quest would be nothing less than an attempt to wed the technology of the West to the spiritualism of the Far East-just as the book's title had originally threatened-I couldn't have stopped reading Mr. Pirsig's "Inquiry Into Values" even if I'd recalled my special boredom and disdain.

And yet however impressive are the seductive powers with which Mr. Pirsig engages us in his motorcycle trip, they are nothing compared to the skill with which he interests us in his philosophic trip. Please don't be fooled by the desultory tone with which the narrative proceeds up to this point, or for that matter by the author's somewhat obscure professional credentials (according studied chemistry and philosophy (B.A., 1950) and journalism (M.A., 1953) at the University of Minnesota and also attend-Benares Hindu University in India, where he studied TM not certain at what point Oriental philosophy," and one gathers from the text that he now makes his living writing technical instruction manuals).

Mr. Pirsig may sometimes appear to be a greener-America proselytizer, with his beard and his motorcycle tripping and his talk about learning to love technology. But when he comes to grips with the hard philosophical conundrums raised by the 1960s, he can be electrifying.

You see, what drove his afterego. Phaedrus, insane was some simple but stubborn questions that occurred to him when he was teaching English composi-tion at the University of Montana-namely, what is the nature of quality in art and how was he to teach it to his students? From these questions, by a process of reasoning far too elaborate even to be hinted at in this space, Phaedrus sprang himself from the "trap" of Western dualism in which quality appeared to be subordinate to the interaction of subject and object and escaped into an over-arching Oriental monism in which quality stood for the Buddha. And in the process he not only solved the aesthetic questions that had provoked his quest to begin with, he resolved the conflict between science and religion

Of course, the professional philosophers would have none of it (they had too much at stake in what Phaedrus regarded as the conspiracy of Aristotelian dislecticism). So Phaedrus (who got his name from the title character of a famous Socratic dialogue went insane, "died," and re-emerged as our motor-cycling narrator. The only ques-tion that now remains is whether Phaedrus's ghost will claim the narrator's son, who is himself beginning to show symptoms of the same insane passion for truth. It all sounds a little bafflir.g

I know, but take my word for it: it makes almost perfect sense as you read it. If Phaedrus actually goes insane, then a reader of his mental processes goes insane with him. In fact, I now regret that I lack the expertise in philosophy to put Mr. Pirsig's ideas to a proper test, for this book may very well be a profoundly important one—a great one even—full of insights into our most perplexing contemporary dilemmas. I just don't know. But whatever its true philosophical worth, it is intellectual entertainment of the highest off the philosophical mountain that Mr. Pirsig climbs (naturally, he and Chris climb a literal mountain at the same time, I had even grown interested in motorcycle maintenance and the author's homely little talks on how to tinker with machines without losing one's philosophical cool. And now I even see what he means when he writes, "The study of the art of motorcycle maintenance is really a miniature study of the art of rationality itself... the motorcyle is primarily a mental phenomenon... the real cycle you re working on is a cycle called yourself." Go. philosopher, go!

Mr. Lehmann-Haupt is a New York Times book revision.

Whether or not to hold up an ace in dummy's long, strong suit is usually a simple matter of signaling. The other defender carefully signals his length in the suit, playing high-low with an even number of cards, and the ace is played on the declarer's last card in the suit. But in some rare situations the defender has to make his decision before he has seen a card in the suit played by his partner. East faced this problem on the diagrammed deal and failed to solve Tempted by the favorable vulnerability, South ventured a weak two-bid in diamonds.

West might have overcalled two hearts, but he chose a take-out double in the hope of finding a spede fit. North made a welljudged jump to five diamonds. leaving East to make a difficult decision. He no doubt considered five hearts, which would have failed by only one trick after the normal lead of the diamond queen, but he doubled. This would have been right if he had found the right defense, but it turned out to be very wrong.

West led a high heart, which was ruffed in the dummy. With no quick entry to his hand, South was in some difficulty. He led the club king, putting East to the test at once

As West had had no chance to signal his club length. East feared that South might have a singleton club --- West's take-out double might very well have been based on 4-4-1-4 distribution. East therefore snatched his ace to make sure of a trick, and thereby ruined the defense,

A club was returned to dummy, and the declarer was in full control. He cashed the diamond ace and continued chibs. East ruffed the fourth round of clubs with a low trump and South overruffed. He then ruffed a heart and played the last club winner, discarding his spade loser. The diamond king was the second and final trick for the defense, so the doubled game was

East could have worked out that the defense had no chance if South had a singleton club. The declarer would make 11 tricks in much the fashion that he actually did. The important thing was to take two more tricks for the defense, not just one, and by ducking one round of clubs East could have ensured the defeat of the contract. However he plays. South must then lose a heart trick or permit West to ruff a chub.

disappear when he is performing in another team's arena. That a hat the Flyers coach, Fred Shero, likes bost about him.

"So man; guys in this league are tough only in their own rink." Shero has said. "Dave Schultz gave us courage on the road. You coult measure the value of a man like that."

Perhaps not, but one measure is the Flyers' ruceres. In their scienth season as one of the DHU's expansion terms, they finished first in the West Division and they currently are undejeated in six playelf games. They have several artists. Booby Clarke, the diabetic min'er, is their thorographer. Bernie Parent, the ecrobatic goaliender, is their cramatist.

Notorious Performers

They have several other notorious performers. ten, such as Andre (Moose) Dupont, Don (Big Bird) Sale-hi and Beb (Mad Dog) Kell), vito contributed to a team record of 1,750 manutes in principles this season, 603 more than the runner-up. But in bookey, mass violence often is a plus ineter. When a team is that rough, it gots away with us many, it not more, infractions than it is penalized for. The referee unit coing to disrupt the game by cailing every-tions. And often when a Flyer is penalized, an opponent is, too.

"I usually take somebody with me " Schultz says, "and then it's all even out there." Another aspect of his reputation is that he's a ordyguard for smaller teammates. They usually don't say anything, but I can tell they appreciate it," he says, "But one time hen Wayne Hillman was with us, he told me, Schultzie. I've been around this league a long time, but you're the best I've ever seen." That really made me feel good "

But his reputation can be a chore because Opposing players are so ample of him

NEW YORK, April 25 (UPI),--Paul Splittorff and Doug Bird combined on a two-hitter today and veteran Vada Pinson drove home a pair of runs to spark the Kansas City Royals to a 6-1 victory over the New York Yankees. After yielding a single to Elliott Maddox in the second inning. Splittorff (2-1) retired 13 straight batters until Lou Piniclia drilled a double to deep center to lead off the seventh. Pinjella later scored the lone Yankee run on an infield grounder and Thurman Munson's sacrifice fly.

Buddhist Pagoda For Paris With An Ecumenical Point of View

By Betty Werther

PARIS, April 25 (IHT).—Paris will soon have a religious and cultural center where the capital's estimated 12,000 Bud-dhists can practice their religion and where a growing number of interested people can learn mor-about the teachings of Buddha. Construction of a Buddhist pagoda will begin later this year on a two-acre site in Vincennes. Already in place is a monumental bronze scuipture of Zen pilgrims, a gift of Japan. The bronze by Torao Yazahi (a student of both Japanese master Denchu Hiragushi and the Eussian-born French sculptor Oscar Zadking: "appropriately marks." the inscription reads, "this crossroads between East and

It is still used for that purpose. The new pagoda will be built beside the Lac Daumesnii in the Bois de Vincennes on land put at the disposal of the Institut International Bouddhique, established last year to carry out the project by the Paris City Council. Since the building will replace a long-unused museum, the structure is acceptable to city planners who otherwise prohibit new buildings in the park.

One of the unusual characteristics of the center will be its ecumenical outlook. All Buddhist schools, mainly those grouping Theravada Buddhism, practiced in Southeast Asia (Sri Lanka. Cambodia, Vietnam, Laos, Burma) and Maheyana Buddhism, including Zen, practiced in the North (Japan, Tibet and to an unknown extent in China, will be on an equal Stones brought from Buddhist temples around the world will be integrated in one of the pagoda walls, and a relic of Bud-dha placed in the sanctuary.

To reach the pagoda, visitors must cross a lotus pond in the center of an Oriental garden where sculpture-including the one denated by Japan—and stone lanterns will blend with exotic plants and shrubbery. Steps and terraces leading into the temple will be used for open-air ceremonies. A library, cells for bonzes and visiting teachers, a large conference hall and refectory will complete the ensemble. Jean Sainteny, a former

French minister and a member of the Constitutional Council, is president of the Institut International Bouddhique, which has received staunch support in official French circles. Among its sponsors are André Malraux, Alain Peyrefitte and Maurice Schumann.

PEOPLE: The Ambassador and the Striker

The California Court of Appeals has ruled against Walter Annenberg, ambassador to the Court of St. James's, and held that his servants with labor grievances have the right to picket his Palm Springs hone.
"When one accepts employment
... in a private home, he does not thereby become some kind of second-class working person," the court ruled. The case involved 15 greenkeepers who tend the private 18-hole golf course on Annenberg's 350-acrc estate. The greenkeepers went on strike four years ago seeking pay parity with golf course keepers in the area. They contended that their pay of $2.50 an hour was $1.25 less than the going rate. Annenberg's lawyers said that the ambassador went to court to restrain the picketing because his striking employees were throwing beer cans on his grounds and calling people names.

Does this sound familiar? Actress Elizabeth Taylor and actor Richard Burton are seeking a divorce. The announcement was made Thursday by a spokesman in Hollywood: "Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton have requested that their longtime friend and attorney Aaron Frosch proceed to legally terminate their 10-year marriage on the grounds of irreconcilable differences. Prosch has indicated that the divorce will be obtained in Bern. Switzerland, where the Burtons have been residents for many years."

Miss Taylor arrived in Hollywood Tuesday after several weeks' vacation with her mother and some of her children at her brother's home in Hawaii. Burton has been hospitalized in Santa Monica for the past 12 days with bronchial problems. The couple, who separated last summer, were reconciled a few days before Christmas, 1973.

Soccer star Georgie Best left a London court Wednesday, cleared of charges of burglary and theft filed by the former Miss World, Marjorie Wallace, of In-dianapolis. Best, 37, was accused of entering Miss Wallace's apartment and stealing a fur coat, her passport and some jewelry two months ago. But the key witness. East Hanover, N.J., points out that the "Swiss national anthem is not sung to the tune of 'God Save the Queen' (People, April 5). The reason for the search (for) a new Swiss national anthem..is because the present anthem is too difficult... to be sung by a large group of people." The story's more complicated than that. "Ruf Du, Mein Vaterland," the national anthem until the early '60s, was indeed sung to the tune of "God Save the Queen." Then the "Le Cantique Suisse," a song written in 1843 by Father Albertck Zwyssig and long sung in Swiss schools, was tentatively adopted. According to Jean-Claude Gehrig, secretary-general of the Swiss Association of Musicians, his organiza-tion was consulted in 1973 about the advisability of another anthem switch. The association thought it best to stick—at least provisionally-with "Le Cantique Suisse." Gehrlg says that there is a relatively small movement underway to dispense with Father Zwyssig's anthem—but that the association is not backing a contest to find a new one.

Would You Be Happy With 2 x 39 PERCENT PER YEAR? This has been our advertibute campaign for many months and hundreds of investors were indeed pleased to think in terms of 2 x 20 percent. We finally must apologize the commodity market in the last months has been so active that many of our citents have earned 5 x 20 percent in 3 months. We are very pleased for them and happy about the market. If you would be pleased with 30 percent 3 and more times a year, the markets might strovise you too.
